Editorial

This issue of Kalmiopsis is a bit thin. We could have used another feature but this year it has been particularly difficult prying articles out of folks. I guess everyone has been busy. I do like what we have, though. Working on Bruce's article made me want to revisit probably the least known section of our coast. I continue my inclusion of history in Kalmiopsis with Rhoda's short but sweet (I had to say it) piece on the founder of the UO Herbarium. And in Howie's examination of Artemisia ludoviciana ssp. estesii he writes evocatively about the Deschutes region. The plant of the year is so spectacular I had to put it on the cover.

This is my final issue as editor. I have enjoyed doing it but I have too many demands on my time these days. I would like to encourage anyone literarily inclined to seriously consider taking up the red pencil and becoming editor of Kalmiopsis. You will be glad you did.

NOTICE TO CONTRIBUTORS

The Society invites members and others to submit articles, book reviews, botanical artwork and photographs for publication in KALMIOPSIS. Acceptance will be based on suitability. (Articles dealing with formal nomenclatural proposals or of a highly technical nature are NOT acceptable.)

Two double-spaced typewritten or near letter-quality manuscript copies (plus an IBM compatible disc in WordPerfect or an ASCII file, if possible) should be submitted to the editor well before the October 30 deadline for a late winter publication date. Include name, address, phone number, and a biographical line for the About The Authors section. We prefer 8x10 B&W photographs. Design artwork and photographs to meet the KALMIOPSIS format. Submit original artwork or first-generation photographs (no copies or halftones). Plan continuous tone and line artwork for 1/3 to 1/2 reduction in the text. Use the name and year system for literature cited. Keep footnotes to a minimum.
